General information

Stay alert

Be aware of navigation markers in the lagoons of the Leeward Islands.

Passes are wide and wind is consistent in Tahaa, but wind can be affected by the geography of the island.

There is considerable maritime activity and traffic.

Perfect conditions

The Leeward Islands are located on an amphidromic point, not subject to the lunar tide, only solar.
 High tide all year round at midday and midnight;
 Low tide at 6 am and 6 pm.
 Tide differential of only 20 to 30 cm.

- 🚤 No lunar tidal range; amphidromic point in the South Pacific meaning lower current in the passes.
- 🚤 Easterly trade winds (oriented SE in winter and NE in austral summer).
- 🚤 Sailing in the lagoon protected from the swell by the coral reef.
- 🚤 Well-protected anchorages on the lee side of the island.

🚤 Weather and Safety

Safe sailing

- 🚤 There are many users of the lagoon: maritime shuttles, activity providers, fishermen, inhabitants, yachtsmen...
Sail carefully
- 🚤 In the lagoon, follow the markers and channels.
- 🚤 For visibility, navigate with the sun at its zenith or behind you.

Watch out for pearl farms, even when sailing in the channels.

The buoys on the zones support submerged lines to which pearl oysters are attached.

- Guidelines

Safe sailing

Reminder: When snorkeling, remember to trail a buoy in order to remain visible.

If you wish to surf in the passes, make sure you have the agreement and goodwill of local surfers.

Trailing a buoy when swimming or snorkeling heightens awareness of your presence in the water, and offers a safety device in case of faintness, fatigue, or drowning. Include a whistle to assist with getting emergency assistance.

🚩 Guidelines

Specific markings for the Leeward Islands

In the Leeward Islands, a green starboard/red port marker (international system) is located at the entrance of the pass. The markings are different in the lagoon: green on the reef side and red ashore.

Isolated dangers are identified by cardinal markers.

Raiatea and Tahaa's navigable passes are all wide. The main ones have range markers.

Sailing at night within the lagoon is not recommended as some of the beacons do not have lights.

Regulation

Visiting these islands is a privilege. Many resident sailboats inhabit these waters, as well as registered charter boats or those passing through. There are numerous providers of lagoon activities, transport shuttles, and family or professional fishermen.

In consideration of the movement and activity of maritime traffic, the protection of sensitive areas, and respect for resident populations, regulated anchoring areas (ZMRs) have been established. The Polynesian Maritime Affairs Directorate (DPAM) has imposed a limit on the number of vessels and length of stay per area.

Anchoring information for these areas is provided for guidance only, pending the installation of permanent mooring facilities in 2026.

DPAM ambassadors have been appointed for these zones. Their function is to raise awareness of these quota and duration rules and to better quantify usage. Please give them a warm welcome if they visit your vessel.

Practical tips & guidelines

Responsible cruisers

Your behaviour is important.

The welcome given to cruisers in the islands, atolls, and motus depends on your ability to adapt and respect the 5,000 inhabitants living there.

We must respect

- Regulated anchorage areas, quotas and durations
- No nudity at anchor, ashore, or even while showering on deck!
- No illegal AirBnB/chartering on visiting yachts
- No underwater lights at night, so as not to disturb the underwater fauna/wildlife and no strobes on deck or masthead.
- Peace & quiet for residents - no noise disturbances

Safe Snorkeling

- Refrain for using fins in shallow areas to avoid damaging the coral.
- Due to heavy traffic in the lagoon, use a buoy or flag to indicate your presence at the surface.

We must protect

- ✦ No pollution in the lagoons:
rubbish, liquid waste, grey water, sunscreen, etc.
- ✦ No organic waste:
it will end up on shore and near houses
- ✦ Use holding and grey water tanks.
Discharge of grey and black water 3 NM offshore.
- ✦ No unauthorised dumping
of household waste on shore.
The only waste facility is located in Tapuamu.
- ✦ Do not collect live shellfish
